Meditative Art That is Microscopic and Cosmic

Sheldon Krevit creates meditative paintings and drawings that are described as “contemplative, textural, material essences”. For him, “the microscopic and the cosmic are part of one continuum.”

During his momentous and admirable career Sheldon has exhibited with such renowned artists as Robert Motherwell, Willem de Kooning and Cindy Sherman. His art resides in numerous private and public collections including New Haven Public Library, CT, Town of Fairfield, CT, and Connecticut Bank & Trust Company, CT, among others.

Sheldon's solo exhibition at 22 Wooster Gallery in NYC, NY was featured in a full page essay in ARTS magazine. His work has received favorable mention in numerous other publications, including The New York Times.

Sheldon is a member of the Kehler Liddell Gallery in New Haven, CT. He has also exhibited at the Phoenix Art Museum, Stamford Museum & Nature Center, New Britain Museum of American Art, The Jay Etkin Gallery, Memphis, TN, The Center for Contemporary Art, Santa Fe, Kehler-Liddell Gallery, and The Ely Center of Contemporary Art, New Haven.

His art was selected for “Artists For World Peace”, a juried online exhibition presented by The Healing Power of ART & ARTISTS, an initiative of Manhattan Arts International.

Sheldon's mesmerizing art requires being focused in the present moment. He explains, "I never know how long a particular work may take to create, because I don't know where the activity of creating it will lead me. Time (and therefore patience) is not a factor. I take each piece as far as I can, until it's resolved."

The artist currently lives in Connecticut and has lived and exhibited in NYC, NY and Santa Fe, NM. He graduated from both the Philadelphia College of Art (UArts), and the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts.
